"I don't know what percentage of me would be Charlie Brown — certainly some. I'm a little bit of all the characters because that's what I draw. I used to be more Lucy than I am now, but I'm not much any more — I've learned to temper my sarcastic remarks. The strip is very personal and all the things in the strip are things that I think about."

— Charles Schulz, 1987

Resistance is Futile (Especially with Footballs)

Chuck Klosterman

It's difficult to write objectively about Charlie Brown. It always feels like I'm writing about myself.

This, I realize, is no accident.

I know that Charlie Brown is the type of character consciously designed to make average people feel like they're looking at an image of themselves. If you can't empathize with Charlie Brown, you likely lack an ability to empathize with any fictional character. Here is a boy continually humiliated for desiring nothing more than normalcy — the opportunity to kick a football, the aptitude to fly a kite, the freedom to walk down the sidewalk without having an acquaintance compare his skull to a block of lumber. He wants glory, but not an excessive amount (one baseball victory would be more than enough). He has the coolest dog in town, but that often plays to his disadvantage. He's an eight-year-old who needs a psychiatrist, and he has to pay the bill himself (only five cents, but still). Charlie Brown knows his life is a contradictory struggle, and sometimes his only option is to lie in a dark room, alone with his thoughts. He will never win. Yet here's the paradox: Charlie Brown is still happy. He still has friends. He still gets excited about all the things that are destined to fail.

Very often, young Americans are simultaneously pessimistic about the world and optimistic about themselves — they assume everyone's future is bleak, except (somehow) their own. Charlie Brown is the opposite. He knows he's doomed, but that doesn't stop him from trying anything and everything. It's the quality that makes him so infinitely likeable: he does not see the world as cruel. He believes the world is good, even if everything that's ever happened in his life suggests otherwise. All he wants are the things everyone else seems to get without trying. He aspires to be average, which — for him — is an impossible dream.

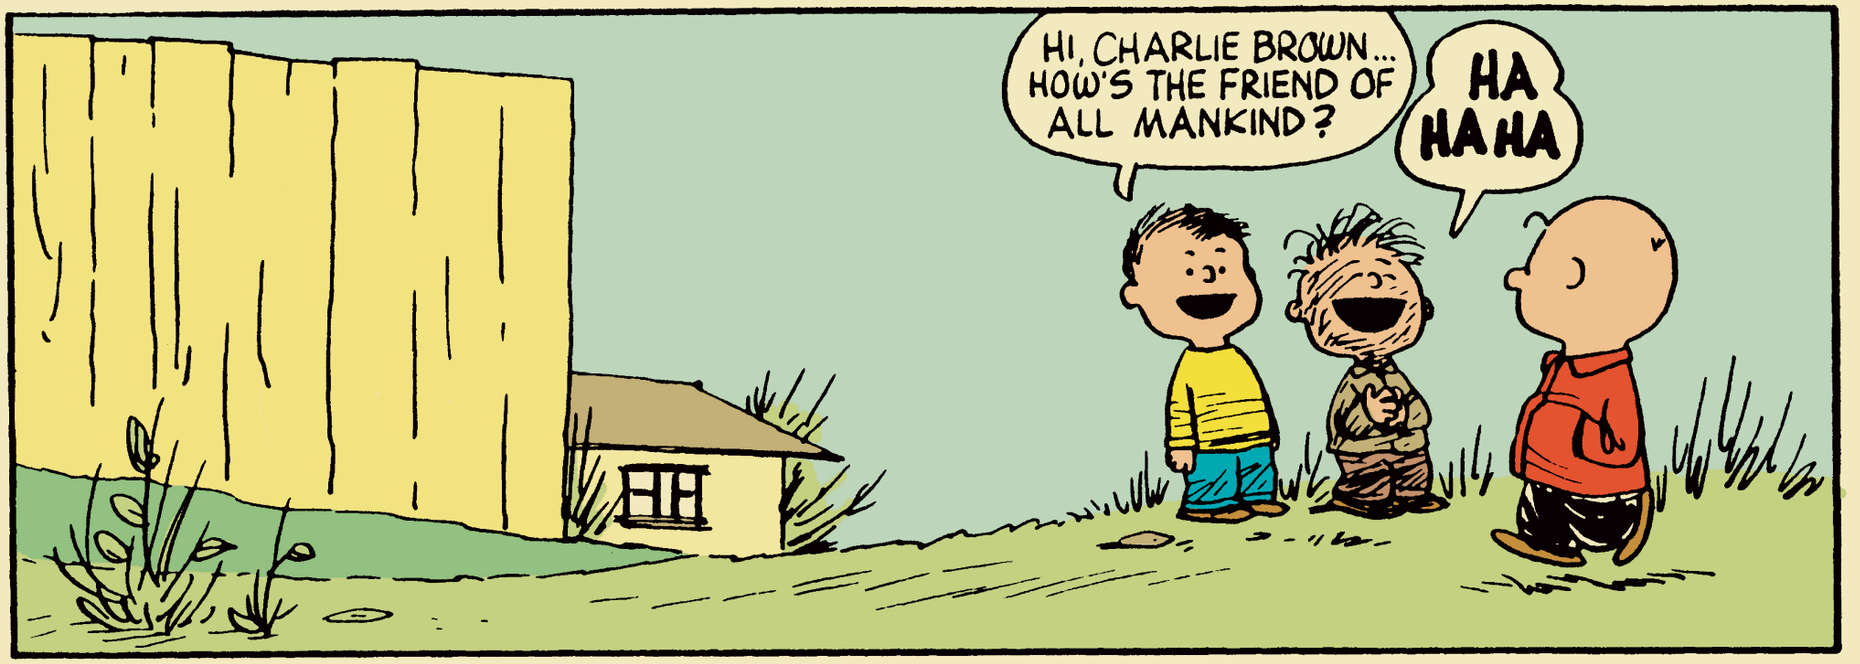

I suppose nobody feels this way all the time. But everybody feels this way some of the time.

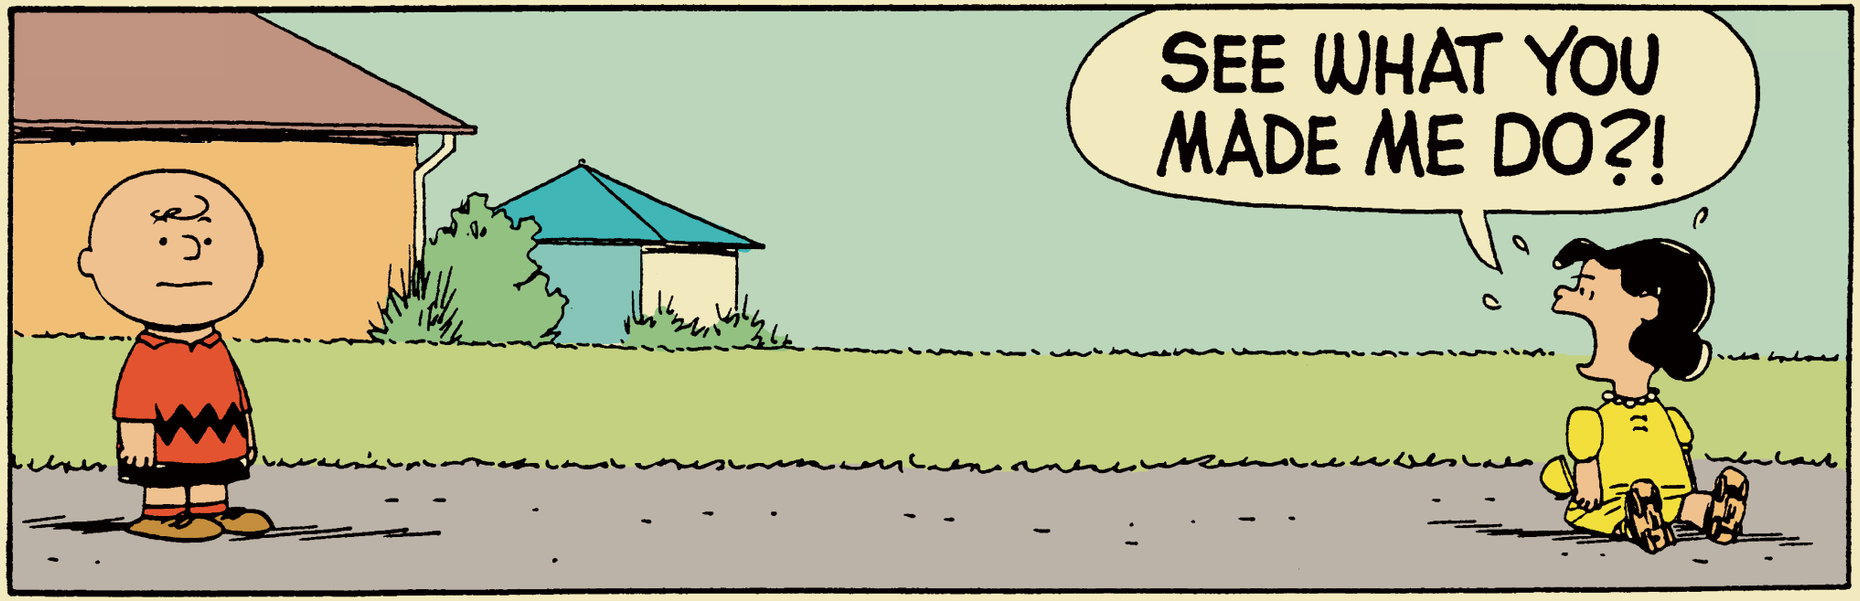

Charles M. Schulz died on February 12, 2000. The final Peanuts strip ran the very next day, a coincidence noted by virtually everyone who cared about the man and his work. In the years since his passing, I've noticed a curious trend: for whatever reason, it has become popular to assert that the spiritual center of the Peanuts universe is not Charlie Brown. The modern answer to that question is Snoopy: dynamic, indefatigable, and hyper-imaginative. Perception has drifted toward what the public prefers to celebrate. It's a little like what happened on the TV show Happy Days: a sitcom originally focused on awkward Richie Cunningham evolved into a vehicle for the super-coolness of Fonzie. Obviously, this type of paradigm shift is no crime against humanity, and I love Snoopy almost as much as his owner (he's a wonderful dancer, and he might be my all-time favorite novelist). But Snoopy is not the emotional vortex of Peanuts. That's simply wrong. The linchpin to Peanuts will always be Charlie Brown. It can be no one else. And this is because Charlie Brown effortlessly embodies what Peanuts truly is: an introduction to adult problems, explained by children.

The probable (read: inevitable) death of daily newspapers will yield a lot of collateral damage, some of which will matter more than others. I don't know where the gradual disappearance of the Sunday comics falls on this continuum, or even if it belongs at all; I assume something else will replace its role in the culture, and the notion of bemoaning such a loss will eventually be categorized as nostalgia for a period where the media was controlled by dinosaurs who refused to accept that the purpose of every news story was to provide random people the opportunity to publicly comment on how they felt about it.

But I will miss the Sunday comics. As a kid, I loved the idea that there was at least one section of the newspaper directly targeted at my brain; as an adult, it was reassuring to read something that was still the exact same product I remembered from the past. It was static in the best possible way. Like most people, I moved through various adolescent phases where different strips temporarily became my favorite: Garfield in fifth grade, The Far Side throughout high school, Calvin and Hobbes as a college boozehound. But I always considered Peanuts the most "important" comic strip, and the one that all other strips were measured against. The fact that Peanuts was the very first strip on the top of the Sunday comics' front page verified this subjective belief; if comics were rock bands, it seemed obvious that Peanuts was the Beatles.

The strips in this collection stretch from 1956 to 1960. This was a transitional period for Peanuts — the characters no longer have the generic, unsophisticated appearance seen in the early Li'l Folks era, but their fantasies and dialogue rarely skew as surreal as they will become throughout the mid-'60s and beyond. Snoopy "talks," but not in the way we're accustomed to (his concerns tend to be more traditionally dog-like), and his jowls and his gut look a little thin. Linus Van Pelt — still noticeably younger than all the other kids in '57 — eventually becomes interchangeable with his slightly older peers (and Schulz was clearly enamored with Linus during this five-year stretch, as he stars in a majority of the offerings, most notably in a three-week serial where he worries about performing at the Christmas program). Around 1959, we meet Sally Brown for the first time (still an infant).

But the most critical evolution revolves around the persona of Charlie Brown himself. It is during this three-year stretch that he becomes "The Charlie Browniest." Throughout the mid-'50s, Charlie Brown was still confident. On page 13, we see a boy who believes his snow fort is an architectural masterwork; on page 31, Charlie Brown violently punishes the kite he cannot fly. He's not arrogant, but he is self-assured. He's almost a smart aleck. Yet, by the inception of the '60s, this is over. From 1960 onward, Charlie Brown is the person we all recognize from all those various television specials: the unironic loser with a limitless heart, who is endlessly hammered for caring too much.

"Nobody likes me," Charlie Brown says as he stares into space. "All it would take to make me happy is have someone say he likes me."

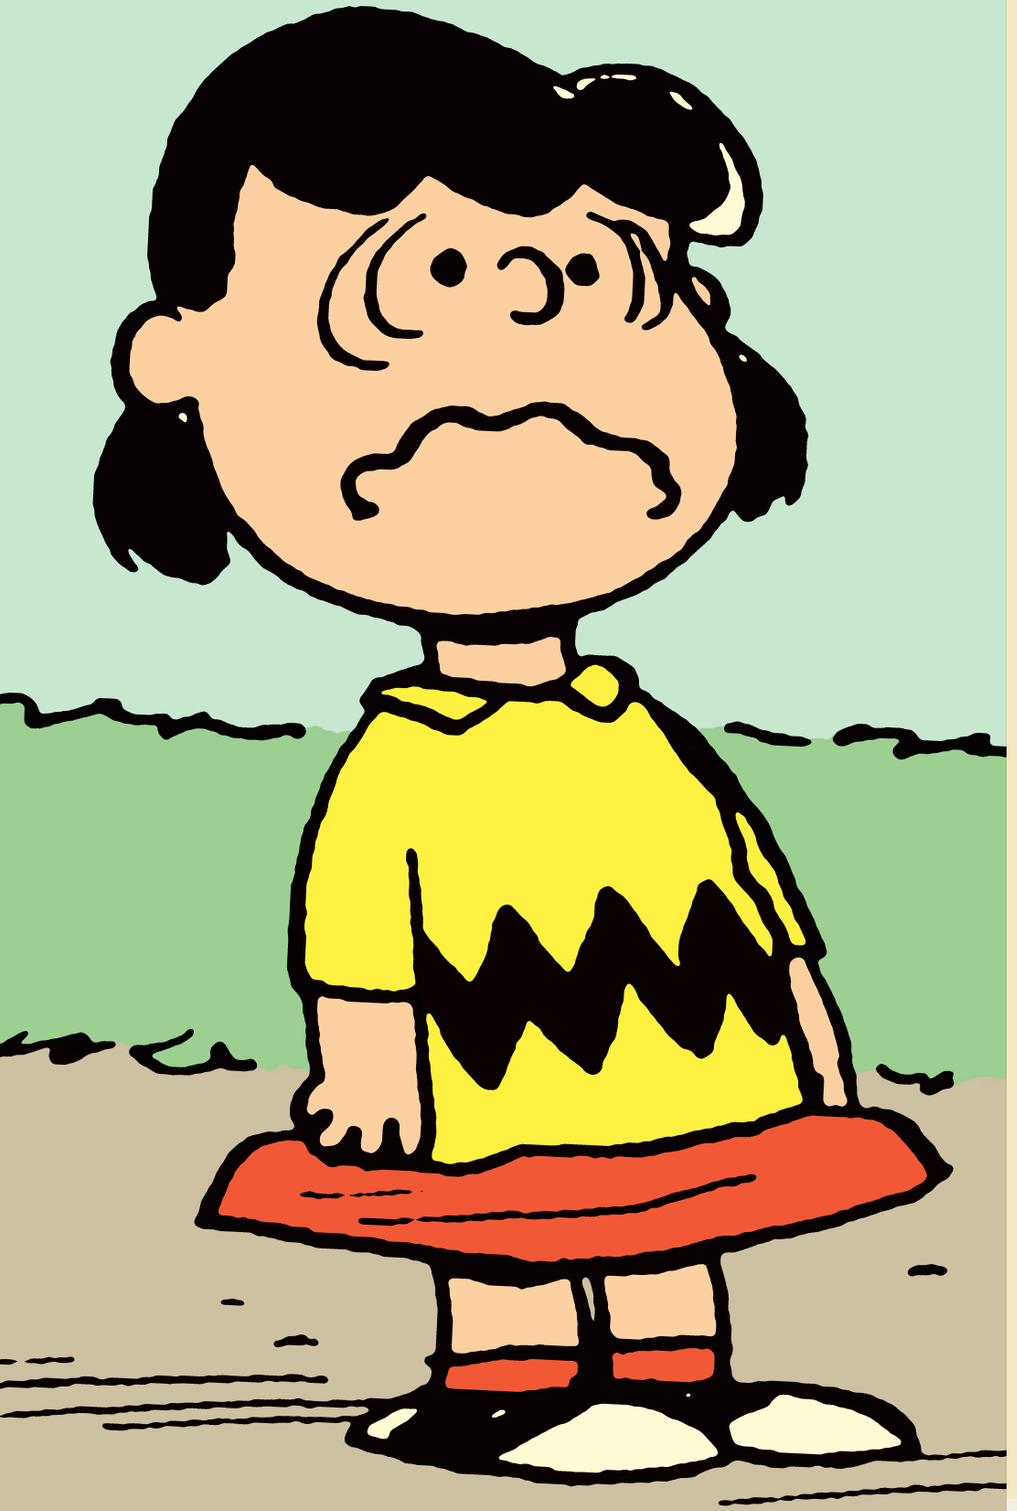

When Lucy overhears this gut-wrenching lament, she's immediately incredulous. "Do you mean to tell me that someone has it within his or her power to make you happy merely by doing such a simple thing?"

Charlie assures her that — yes — this simple act is all it would take. In fact, it almost wouldn't matter if the sentiment weren't true. He just wants to know how it feels to be liked. But even this is still too much to ask for.

"I can't do it," Lucy replies, and then she walks away.

And this, it seems, is the joke.

One of the most common assumptions about Peanuts is that Charlie Brown and Charles M. Schulz are the same person, and that we are able to see the personality of Schulz by studying the personality of Charlie Brown. Certainly, some similarities are undeniable (both their fathers are barbers). But I don't think this perception is totally accurate. The reflection is not as straightforward as it seems. I think that the primordial Li'l Folks version of Charlie Brown — the little guy from the '40s — was Schulz crafting a fictional version of his literal childhood. It was, essentially, who Schulz once was. But the model of Charlie Brown we recognize and love so much more — the model re-invented here, at the end of the '50s — was Schulz crafting a version of how he felt, both in his memory and in the present tense. It was the construct of an adult, suffering through problems only an adult can conceive and recognize. It was also (perhaps) a depiction of how he wanted to feel: Schulz the man was rumored to be a maniacal grudge holder, unwilling to forget any slight or embarrassment ever levied against him. His creative boyhood doppelganger is the opposite; Charlie Brown could always wipe the slate clean. And that makes a profound difference, both for the character and everyone else.

"It's depressing to realize that you're so insignificant you haven't got a chance ever to become president," Charlie Brown tells Lucy on page 89. "It wouldn't be so bad if I thought I had some chance."

Like so much of the classic Peanuts banter, he makes these remarks apropos of nothing — it's just something he seems to be worrying about, for no clear reason. Lucy, of course, obliterates him for voicing this trepidation, mocking him with a tsunami of faint praise, almost as if he had somehow claimed he was destined for political greatness. Now, is her response amusing? I suppose it's a little amusing. But it's mostly dark (and entirely true). At the age of eight, Charlie Brown is considering a reality that most people don't confront until much later: the realization that life is limited. It's not that he desperately wants to become Dwight D. Eisenhower; it's the simple recognition that this couldn't happen even if he did. He's confronting the central myth of childhood, which is that anyone can be anything. Charlie Brown represents the downside of adult consciousness. And what does Lucy represent? Lucy represents the world itself. Lucy responds the way society always responds to any sudden insight of existential despair: How did you not know this already? It doesn't matter how many times this had happened before. It will never stop happening, to Charlie Brown or to anyone else. Like I said — Charlie Brown knows he's doomed. He absolutely, irrefutably knows it. But part of his mind always thinks, "Maybe not this time, though. Maybe I'm wrong."

That glimmer of hope is his true Achilles' heel. It's also the quality that makes him so deeply good and imminently relatable. The joke is not that Charlie Brown is hopeless. The joke is that Charlie Brown knows he's hopeless, but he doesn't trust the infallibility of his own insecurity. If he's always wrong about everything, perhaps he's wrong about this. When he mentions the impossibility of his own presidential fantasy, there's a vague sense that he wants Lucy to tell him he's mistaken. And at first (of course), Lucy does exactly that. She says "maybe." And then (of course) she does what she always does. She reminds Charlie Brown that he is Charlie Brown. Which is how I suspect Charles M. Schulz often felt about himself, up until the very end: "No matter what I do or what I try, I'm always going to be myself."

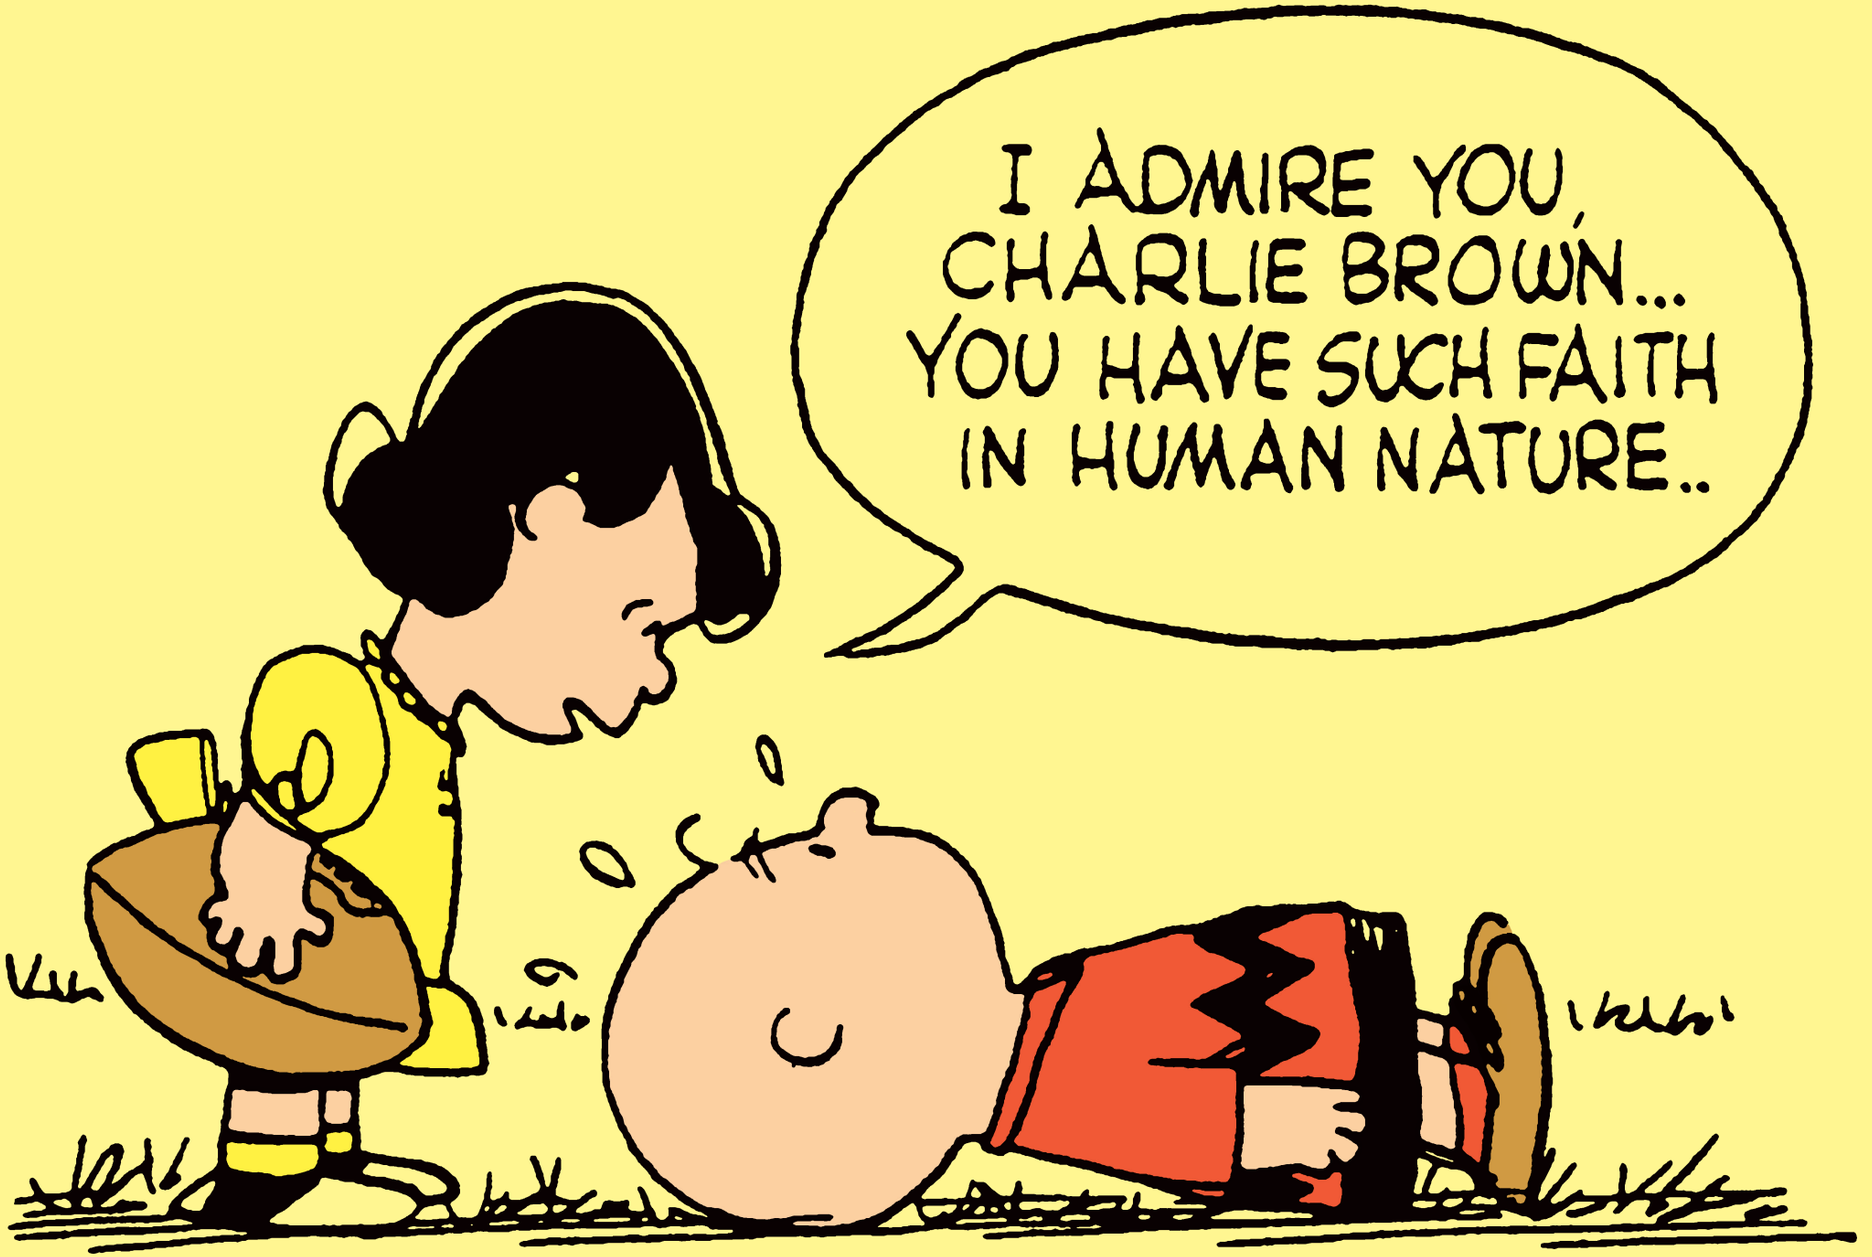

In this volume, there are four strips where Charlie Brown tries to kick a football. Unless you're a yet-to-be-conceived archaeologist reading this book 1,000 years in the future, the outcome of these attempts will not surprise you. Two of theses strips (released roughly a year apart) are so similar they superficially suggest a lack of imagination. In one, Charlie Brown expresses his belief that people have the ability to change and deserve the opportunity to do so (and then he breaks his back); in the other, Lucy compliments his faith in human nature (moments after his back has been broken). This is the reassuring, hyper-eternal, death-and-taxes aspect to Peanuts; the children don't grow up and the episodes don't change. That pigskin's omnipresent unkickability is the Sisyphean symbol for everything in Charlie Brown's life and the pivotal metaphor behind why he matters so much to so many people. It is the apex of his failures. But failing is not what makes Charlie Brown my fictional friend and my personal protagonist. It is his reasoning for placing himself in a position where failure is inevitable.

"I must be out of my mind," he says to himself. "But I can't resist kicking footballs."

He can't resist kicking footballs. Even though he never, ever does. He still can't resist. Charlie Brown will always be himself.

WELL, IT'S REAL GOOD SEEING YOU ALL HERE READY TO BEGIN THE NEW BASEBALL SEASON...
DUE TO THE RAIN TODAY, WE WILL FOLLOW THE INCLEMENT WEATHER SCHEDULE... THIS MEANS STUDYING OUR SIGNALS..
NOW A GOOD BASEBALL TEAM FUNCTIONS ON THE KNOWLEDGE OF ITS SIGNALS.. THIS YEAR WE WILL TRY TO KEEP THEM SIMPLE...
IF I TOUCH MY CAP LIKE THIS, IT MEANS FOR WHOEVER HAPPENS TO BE ON BASE TO TRY TO STEAL..
IF I CLAP MY HANDS, IT MEANS THE BATTER IS TO HIT STRAIGHT AWAY, BUT IF I PUT THEM ON MY HIPS, THEN HE OR SHE IS TO BUNT...
IF I WALK UP AND DOWN IN THE COACHING BOX, IT MEANS FOR THE BATTER TO WAIT OUT THE PITCHER.. IN OTHER WORDS, TO TRY FOR A WALK....
BUT NOW, AFTER ALL IS SAID AND DONE, IT MUST BE ADMITTED THAT SIGNALS ALONE NEVER WON A BALL GAME...
IT'S THE SPIRIT OF THE TEAM THAT COUNTS! THE INTEREST THAT THE PLAYERS SHOW IN THEIR TEAM! AM I RIGHT?
I SAID, AM I RIGHT?

ALL RIGHT, I'LL LEAVE!
YOU THINK I WON'T LEAVE?
WELL, JUST WATCH ME!
I KNOW WHEN I'M NOT WANTED!
WHAT IN THE WORLD ARE YOU DOING?
PACKING! I'M GOING TO RUN AWAY FROM HOME!
HA! YOU BLOCKHEAD, YOU DON'T EVEN KNOW HOW TO RUN AWAY FROM HOME!!
YOU DON'T USE A SUITCASE!!! WHEN YOU RUN AWAY FROM HOME, YOU'RE SUPPOSED TO CARRY EVERYTHING ON THE END OF A STICK! THIS IS TRADITIONAL!
HERE...LET ME SHOW YOU...WE'LL LAY YOUR BLANKET OUT LIKE THIS..
THEN WE'LL WRAP ALL YOUR THINGS IN THE BLANKET, AND TIE IT TO A POLE...
THIS WAY YOU SORT OF PRESERVE THE TRADITIONAL PICTURE OF THE LITTLE BOY RUNNING AWAY FROM HOME
WHENEVER YOU SEE A PICTURE OF SOMEONE RUNNING AWAY FROM HOME, HE'S ALWAYS CARRYING HIS POSSESSIONS ON THE END OF A STICK..
SO LONG! HAVE A NICE TRIP!!
WRITE!
THERE HE GOES...THE LITTLE BOY RUNNING AWAY FROM HOME...
I FEEL SOMEWHAT AKIN TO A FOOL!

YOU'LL HAVE TO GO BACK HOME THIS EVENING, AND THEN YOU'LL HAVE TO LISTEN TO YOUR MOTHER AND DAD TELL EVERYONE ABOUT HOW YOU TRIED TO RUN AWAY, AND YOU WERE SO CUTE AND SO SERIOUS AND THEY'LL ALL LAUGH!
IT JUST DOESN'T DO ANY GOOD! THEY'RE WAY AHEAD OF YOU!
7-17
IN OTHER WORDS, YOU CAN'T FIGHT CITY HALL!
THAT'S RIGHT!
NOW, GO ON HOME, AND FORGET THE WHOLE THING..

I GUESS THAT'S JUST ONE OF THOSE THINGS THAT HAPPEN, THOUGH.. ESPECIALLY IN A CREATIVE FIELD!
I DON'T WANNA TAKE A NAP! I WANNA PLAY OUTSIDE!!!

I COULD JUST LIE HERE ALL DAY, AND WATCH THEM DRIFT BY...
IF YOU USE YOUR IMAGINATION, YOU CAN SEE LOTS OF THINGS IN THE CLOUD FORMATIONS... WHAT DO YOU THINK YOU SEE, LINUS?
WELL, THOSE CLOUDS UP THERE LOOK TO ME LIKE THE MAP OF THE BRITISH HONDURAS ON THE CARIBBEAN..
THAT CLOUD UP THERE LOOKS A LITTLE LIKE THE PROFILE OF THOMAS EAKINS, THE FAMOUS PAINTER AND SCULPTOR...
AND THAT GROUP OF CLOUDS OVER THERE GIVES ME THE IMPRESSION OF THE STONING OF STEPHEN...I CAN SEE THE APOSTLE PAUL STANDING THERE TO ONE SIDE...
UH HUH...THAT'S VERY GOOD... WHAT DO YOU SEE IN THE CLOUDS, CHARLIE BROWN?

I DON'T WANNA BE STONED!!!
TAKE IT EASY... TAKE IT EASY... WE DON'T KNOW FOR SURE YET THAT IT WAS YOUR DOING..
IT'S ONLY HAPPENED TWICE..IF YOU CAN DO IT ONCE MORE, THEN WE'LL KNOW FOR SURE...WE'LL JUST HAVE TO WAIT NOW FOR IT TO START RAINING AGAIN...

WHAT IN THE WORLD ARE YOU TWO STANDING HERE FOR?
THIS IS A SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENT, CHARLIE BROWN
WE THINK MAYBE LINUS IS A "RAIN-STOPPER" SO WE'RE WAITING FOR IT TO START RAINING AGAIN TO FIND OUT ONCE AND FOR ALL
OH, OH! I FELT A DROP! IT'S STARTING TO RAIN! THIS IS IT!! THIS IS THE BIG SCIENTIFIC MOMENT!
9-4
GIVE IT ALL YOU'VE GOT, LINUS! MAKE IT STOP RAINING!

NOBODY LIKES ME!
NOBODY REALLY LIKES ME!
ALL IT WOULD TAKE TO MAKE ME HAPPY IS TO HAVE SOMEONE SAY HE LIKES ME...
ARE YOU SURE?
OF COURSE, I'M SURE!
YOU MEAN YOU'D BE HAPPY IF SOMEONE MERELY SAID HE OR SHE LIKES YOU?
DO YOU MEAN TO TELL ME THAT SOMEONE HAS IT WITHIN HIS OR HER POWER TO MAKE YOU HAPPY MERELY BY DOING SUCH A SIMPLE THING?
YES! THAT'S EXACTLY WHAT I MEAN!
WELL, I DON'T THINK THAT'S ASKING TOO MUCH... I REALLY DON'T...
BUT YOU'RE SURE NOW? ALL YOU WANT IS TO HAVE SOMEONE SAY, "I LIKE YOU, CHARLIE BROWN"....
...AND THEN YOU'LL BE HAPPY?
AND THEN I'LL BE HAPPY!

THERE'S SUCH A JOYOUS SPIRIT TO THIS SEASON!

WITH ALL MY HEART, CHARLIE BROWN..
I BELIEVE THAT ON HALLOWEEN NIGHT THE "GREAT PUMPKIN" RISES OUT OF THE PUMPKIN PATCH WITH HIS BIG BAG OF TOYS!
OH, WHAT A SIGHT THAT MUST BE TO BEHOLD!
THEN HE FLIES THROUGH THE AIR TO DELIVER THE TOYS TO ALL OF THE CHILDREN WHO HAVE BEEN GOOD
IF YOU'VE BEEN BAD DURING THE YEAR, YOU DON'T GET ANY TOYS!
THAT'S UNDER-STANDABLE
EXCUSE ME A MINUTE, CHARLIE BROWN..I WANT TO GO INTO THIS STORE..

JUST A FEELING I HAVE, CHARLIE BROWN, ALTHOUGH I THINK THIS MUST BE THE KIND OF PUMPKIN PATCH HE WOULD PREFER...
